

Organizations of Sigil Prep

School Run Organizations

The Scholastic Review

Sigil Prep's school newspaper, The Scholastic Review has been around since the original curriculum, introducing new programs and smear campaigning faculty members the editorial staff don't like. They got Mordenkainen overturned as headmaster. Don't think the school press has no power.

Members: Dora do'Urden (editor), Trudy Babblingbrook

Student Government

The SG keeps the students' interests in mind when school policy is being determined, and the faculty does, in fact, care what the students think. Sort of.

Members: Maddie Weber (President)

Yearbook Staff

The Yearbook Staff, of course, produces the Yearbook. They also hold a lot of sway over other publications produced by the school: the student handbook, course catalogs, recruitment catalogs, anything a student or potential student might see. Dora do'Urden made sure of that.

Members: Dora do'Urden (editor)

Sporting Teams

Sigil Prep Cheer Squad

Sigil Prep is known by many as a sports college, with a lot of emphasis on athletics. Although it is most famous for its football team, the school's second most prominent athletic organization is the Cheer Squad.

Sigil Prep's cheerleading team has won several competitions, often putting its own competitiveness over the sports they're supposed to be rooting for. Despite widely disparate personalities, they are a tight-knit club who spend a good deal of time together.

Members: Maddie Weber (captain)

Sigil Prep Fencing Team

Sigil Prep has a perfectly serviceable fencing team, which is impressive enough. When you have a school that teaches weapons combat to a large percentage of its students, you really have to stand out to be the ones selected to the sword hitting team.

Members: Crimson Lotus

Sigil Prep Track Team

We may not have the best track team, but we definitely make a run of it.

Coach: Chiron

Sigil Prep Wrestling Team

The Sigil Prep Wrestling Team is one of the school's more successful athletic organizations, with a win record almost as impressive as the football team. We're really good with the homoerotic sports, let me tell ya.

Members: Martin Jozan

The Secret Society of the Head Cheerleaders

Rumor persists of a secret organization composed of the head cheerleaders of all the Division A schools in the Planescape Association. That they gather once a month to discuss... what? Do they have any sort of influence over how the schools are run? Do they control governments or fix games? Or do they just talk about cheerleading?

Well, the organization doesn't exist, so it doesn't matter. But if it did, Maddie Weber's main goal is to take command of it from Conclave of Silverymoon head cheerleader, Mysk. Who is the person who would be the chairperson, if the organization existed. Which it doesn't. Drop it.

Academic Competition Teams

Debate Team

The Debate Team is a good way to express viewpoints and learn to understand the viewpoints of others.

Go. Pro: In studying and arguing opinions different than your own, you learn to empathize with and understand where others are coming from, and in doing so, deepening your own beliefs as well. Con:

Instead of studying issues, you really only study rhetoric, which lessens the value of having beliefs in the first place.

Members: Trivia O'Ceede (secretary)

Student Clubs

Raven's Guild

The Raven's Guild is a model Thieves' Guild supported by Sigil Prep, which functions just like a real thieves' guild, with simulated (not at all real, no sir, just ordinary) missions designed to test the members' skills under realistic conditions (and not to acquire ill-gotten gain, I don't know where they get their funding).

Membership is determined by a blind tap method from existing members, who watch various Rogue (and sometimes other) students who are doing well. Names are nominated, brought up for vote, and if accepted, a standing member invites the new member into the fold. Hazing is harsh, but it results in lots of gold they got from somewhere, I don't know where.

Members: Gizzman, Twilla

Sigil Prep Spelljammer Society

The Sigil Prep Spelljammer Society is a club devoted to Spelljamming enthusiasts. None of them actually has a Spelljammer as yet, but they're all looking forward to getting hold of one. How they're going to get it out of Sigil (or into it in the first place) is anyone's guess.

Member: Fiv (vice president)

Young Knights of Myth Drannor

The Young Knights is a school sponsored adventuring club which promises to take monthly adventures to famous adventuring sites like the Keep on the Borderlands and the Temple of Elemental Evil. They're really good at planning, but terrible at follow-through.

Members: Trivia O'Ceedee (secretary)

Fraternities and Sororities

Delta Ampersand Delta (D&D)

Delta Ampersand Delta is Sigil Prep's most visible fraternity, not because they do the most community service, or work to improve the collegiate environment, but because they throw the most parties. They are a loud, bombastic stereotype of a frat, and lovin' every minute of it.

(Remember kids, the friends you make in D&D are your brothers for life.)

Members: Brady d'Bennigans

Religious Clubs

Students for Lolth

One of the most outspoken of the school's religious clubs, the Students for Lolth is composed largely of overachieving women with long reaches throughout campus. Backstabbing and power grabs are common and expected. Students for Lolth imposes itself into any number of campus events, from sponsoring parade floats to hosting booths at any given fair or festival, to increase (and maintain) its visibility. Partially, this is due to vice president Maddie Weber's uncanny and alignment-defying sense of school spirit, but mostly because they're a group of stuck-up mean girls who want everyone to know they're there.

Ostensibly devoted to the demon queen of spiders and primary Drow divinity, Lolth, the club seems to exist largely so its members can get together, gossip and talk smack about other school power players (while planning to backstab one another.)

Members: Maddie Weber (president), Kree Skr'llwar (vice president), Dora do'Urden (secretary)

*Text and concept by Patrick Duke
Art and logo design by David Cummings
Dungeons & Dragon and all related properties ©Wizards of the Coast*